ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

5

An image processing device automatically generates a frame image around a periphery of a subject image. A color of the frame image is determined by an image processing device based on a feature of the subject image. The feature is related to colors of the subject image. For example, the feature is a color having the largest surface area within the subject image.   A similar color to the feature color is determined as the color of frame.